City, county decision expected on ambulance and fire services

Alternative proposals for providing emergency ambulance service and rural fire protection will be main topics of discussion Monday for Canyon City commissioners and Randall County commissioners.

The two bodies are also expected to vote on the continued operation of the controversial Metro Intelligence Unit under federal funding.

Richard Bertrand of Canyon will meet with both commissions Monday to present a proposal for providing emergency ambulance service to city and country areas.

The proposal would be an alternative to the current ambulance operation which the manager of the local Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors said last week he is interested in being rid of.

Under Bertrand's proposal, he would operate the service as a private business separate from the funeral home.

According to agenda notes by City Manager Glen Metcalf, the Bertrand proposal will be that the city, county and the South Randall County Hospital District provide a subsidy of $800 per month for operation of the ambulance service.

Currently, the city is paying $800 per month while the county is paying substantially less and the hospital district is not paying anything for the service operation.

Metcalf indicates in his agenda notes for commissioners that the action Randall County commissioners take earlier in the day Monday could affect the city's decision on the Bertrand proposal.

"A point of interest is that the county commissioners court also meets Monday afternoon and this item has been placed on their agenda for their discussion," he says. "The results of their action could directly affect the city's position in this matter."

County commissioners meet at 1 p.m. and city commissioners meet at 7 p.m.

County Commissioner Paul Lindsey is expected to present a finished contract instrument for approval by county commissioners for a new plan to provide fire service for rural county areas. Lindsey first proposed the new plan in January, after meetings with the fire representatives from Amarillo, Bushland, Umbarger, Happy, Lake Tanglewood and Canyon.

Canyon city commissioners will also receive the contract for perusal at the Monday night session.

The plan proposed by Lindsey and embraced in the contract calls for the City of Canyon to assume full responsibility for fighting rural fires in Randall County. The county agrees to pay a substantial sum for this service.

Under the contract, fire departments from Bushland, Amarillo, Umbarger, Happy and Lake Tanglewood would be responsible for first-line fire protection for specifically indicated areas surrounding their towns or villages.

They would not, however, respond to other rural fire calls unless asked to do so by the Canyon Fire Department.

The Lindsey plan is partially a response to City of Amarillo charges of $801 per fire call to fight rural Randall County fires.

The contract must also be considered and signed by the other fire fighting unit operators in the county.

Another annual grant for the operation of the Metro Intelligence Unit will also be of concern to both city and county commissioners during their meetings Monday.

A grant application has been prepared for presentation to the Texas Criminal Justice Council for about $90,000 in funding for the next year. The application calls for full funding of the unit with each participating entity providing manpower and vehicles.

City and county commissioners are expected to act favorably on the application.

Randall County Sheriff Cliff Longest, who has one man in the Metro unit, recently said a reorganization of the unit and its activities should make it a more productive police squad. He said he would favor another year's operation of the unit.

Chief of Police Al Stewart of Canyon in a letter to Metcalf recommends that the city continue to participate in the unit.

"The unit in my opinion will be of value to the City of Canyon and to the Police Department," Stewart writes. "As you know some changes have been made and I am satisfied and feel Metro is doing a good job presently."

The county sheriff's department donates one man and a vehicle to the squad. The

Mrs. Gloria McGill, left, and Mrs. Martha Stevens, are two Gene Howe Elementary School teachers who have been at the school since it opened its doors in the fall of 1965. Principal Luther Lawless has headed up the school staff since that time, also. The Gene Howe faculty, students and parents are planning a big anniversary celebration Monday night.

Festivities begin at 7:30 p.m. at school

Gene Howe anniversary is Monday

The students, teachers, parents and staff of the Gene Howe Elementary School, which opened its doors in the fall of 1965, will celebrate Monday the school's 10th anniversary with a big evening fete and open house.

School officials past and present as well as past and present students and teachers are expected to be on hand for the anniversary celebration which begins at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the school.

More than 700 persons are expected to attend.

An evening of songs, speeches and introductions has been scheduled by the PTA and school staff.

Just over 260 students showed up for classes at the new Gene Howe School, which is off Hollywood Road east of the Canyon expressway in the north part of the county, in the fall of 1965 and they found the newly-opened facility had neither water nor finished cafeteria.

Since that time, when 16 teachers taught in 12 classrooms, Gene Howe has become the fastest growing school in the Canyon School District.

Today, the school's enrollment stands at 575 students and two portable classrooms have been added to the campus to accomodate the load.

Twenty-six teachers now have classroom duties at the school and Gene Howe will graduate its largest 6th grade class, 110 children, when school ends this spring.

More than 750 students have passed through the six grades and kindergarten at Gene Howe.

Only three staff members remain at the school from the original staff which reported for work in the fall of 1965. They include Luther Lawless, principal, and teachers Mrs. Pat Stephens and Mrs. Gloria McGill.

Since it began operation 10 years ago, Gene Howe has become "the center of the community" for those Canyon School District residents who live in the north part of the county, according to Lawless and PTA officials.

The principal said he's stressed parental involvement in the program at the school and has worked with what has become a very successful PTA program.

Those elements of the Gene Howe community which have had an impact on the school will be most honored during the ceremonies Monday night to commemorate the school's 10th anniversary.

Troyce Mulherin, a past president of the PTA, will welcome guests to the celebration and open house when the ceremonies open at 7:30 p.m.

Camp Fire Group 304, consisting of Shelley Jobe, Stacy Howard, Rhonda Golden, Michelle Dupris, Darla Thompson and Ann Lee, will lead the pledge to the flag.

The Rev. Hardy Stevens will give the invocation.

Margie Phillips will give a brief history of the school song and then J. W. King, Canyon band director, will lead the school's sixth grade students in the singing of the song.

Among those to be honored will be Wes Izzard, editor in chief of the Amarillo Globe News, Troy Martin, publisher of the Canyon News, Mrs. Shelby Kritser, Dr. Charles Nester, Tom Keeling, Huelyn Laycock, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. McGill and Mrs. Ernestine Harp. Nester was school board president at the time Gene Howe was built and Keeling is current board president. Laycock was superintendent of the Canyon schools in 1965. Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. McGill are two remaining faculty members who taught at Gene Howe in 1965, and Mrs. Harp is president of the PTA.

Lawless will introduce the 10 special guests and each will be given the opportunity to address the audience.

Also to be introduced during the evening will be current board members, Ed Wieck, R. B. Richardson, Harold Erwin, Walter Graham, Richard Pruitt and Dr. Dudley Moore. Past board members Wesley Cox, Jerry LaGrone, Newton Cain and Joe Gill will also be introduced, as will Randall County School Trustees Don Marsh, R. B. Gist Jr., J. D. Barker, Joe Turpin and Charles Purcell.

Mrs. Harp will give a brief history of the Gene Howe PTA and will introduce all past presidents of the organization.

The PTA will unveil its 10-year anniversary gift for the

WT's Box leads attack on Constitution article

Cloyce Box, chairman of the West Texas State University board of regents, joined with the chairman of the board of Texas Tech, Saturday in denouncing the higher education section of the proposed new Texas Constitution which last week received state Senate approval.

Box, A.M. Willis, chairman of the North Texas State board, and Clint Formby, chairman of the Tech board, attacked the higher education provision, declaring the section would make second class citizens of those colleges and universities not in the University of Texas system or the Texas A&M University system.

A statement issued jointly by Box, Willis and Formby was made on behalf of the 136 board members from the 24 colleges and universities not included in the two major university systems in the state.

The statement says under the proposed constitutional article as passed by Senators early last week, the UT, and A&M systems will continue to have constitutional authority to issue bonds for construction purposes.

But, university regents and board members at institutions such as WTSU will have the constitutional authority now granted by the 1876 Constitution jerked and local control of bond issues will be granted the legislature instead, the statement says.

"Without clear constitutional authority to issue bonds at the local level and under local control, we become second-class citizens," Box, Willis and Formby said. "This is hard to understand and totally unacceptable."

The three said "centralization of power in Austin" as is granted in Article 7, Section 9E of the proposed Constitution "will result in chaos for higher education."

Other board members also joined in the protest, including William Button, chairman of the East Texas State board; William M. Thacker, chairman of the

City senior citizens negotiating for purchase of church building

Canyon Senior Citizens Association has abandoned plans to finance and construct a new building in West Canyon and is negotiating with a local church to purchase the old First Christian Church building at 18th Street and 5th Avenue.

Dutch Cleavinger, senior citizens president, said last week the group is negotiating with representatives of the University Church of Christ to purchase the old church building as a senior citizens center for Canyon.

Members of First Christian Church are still meeting in the old structure until renovation is completed on their new church at 21st Street and 4th Avenue. The old structure was traded to members of the University Church of Christ in the deal which led to the purchase by First Christian of the old Central Church of Christ building.

Cleavinger said a 90-day fund-raising campaign has been mapped out to help finance the purchase of the old church building. The senior citizens have already raised about $3500 for purchase or construction of a building.

The senior citizens association executive board unanimously supported the probable purchase of the church structure as an alternative to construction of a new building on a lot to be donated to the association in West Canyon, Cleavinger said.

He said the alternative was adopted after the senior citizen board realized there would not be enough room on the donated lot for construction of a large building. He said they were also concerned with costs related to construction for curb and gutter of streets.

But, Cleavinger said, the primary reason for the change was due to the location of the proposed lot, which is located on 4th Avenue east of the railroad tracks.

The church structure, he said, is more centrally located and more accessible for senior citizens who live primarily in the downtown areas.

Cleavinger said a first priority, when negotiations are ended, will be to pay for the building before remodeling of the church will be attempted.

The church has two floors. The ground floor contains a large sanctuary and balcony seating. The lower floor or basement contains a kitchen, rest rooms, a large game room and four classrooms.

The quest for a facility has been a main preoccupation for the senior citizens association since last fall. Currently, the organization meets each Thursday evening at the Canyon community center.

However, members have attempted to find a building unsuccessfully with county financial aid and with federal financial aid.

Terse letter ends tiff between IRS, chamber

The tiff between the Canyon Chamber of Commerce and the Internal Revenue Service ended abruptly last week with receipt by the chamber of a four-sentence letter from the IRS.

The letter, addressed to former Chamber President John Childs, says:

"We have received your letter regarding the bill you received.

"Please disregard the bill since it was mailed to you in error. We regret any inconvenience we may have caused.

"Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention."

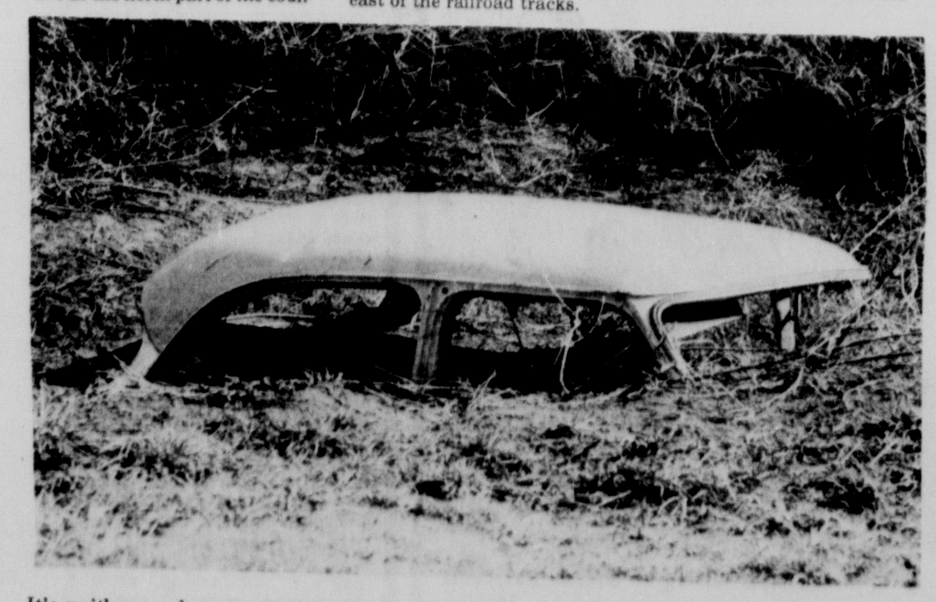
The letter is signed by Joseph Conners for T. Lamagna of the IRS Cornwell Heights, Pa., office.

Childs had written the IRS in March explaining after several earlier attempts had failed that the service erred in billing the chamber for $10,000 in penalties the IRS said the chamber owed for failing to file income tax reports for the past three years.

The bout began last August when the chamber board had formally recognized the women's division of the chamber as an official arm of the chamber. Manager Roland Black then filed amended tax returns to reflect the women's division income and expenditures, even though both are tax-exempt organizations.

According to Gene Glazener, CPA and chamber director, the IRS apparently decided the amended returns were, in fact, late returns, failed to check other records on file in Pennsylvania, and billed the chamber for penalties.

Glazener, Childs and Black made numerous phone calls and wrote several letters to the IRS explaining the problem, all to no avail until last week. Early in March, the IRS had informed the chamber that payment of the $10,000 in penalties should be forthcoming or the federal agency would seize the chamber's assets.



It's neither modern art nor the results of a typical Panhandle dust storm. Somebody cut the top from their old car and tossed the top on the roadside southeast of Canyon, leaving the impression the vehicle was buried in the sandy soil.

Another $50,000 assessed school

A new way of figuring the state formula for public school funding will cost the Canyon School District about $50,000 next fiscal year, Supt. Jerry Jacobs said last week.

The complicated formula used by the Texas Education Agency to figure how much state and how much local money will be required to operate schools in the state's school districts was altered by a recent state attorney general's opinion, he said. The formula rests on the theoretical base that each school district should provide funding commensurate with the economic base of the district.

Jacobs said in the past the formula has been figured partially using the assessed tax valuation of the county in which the school district lies. The attorney general's opinion, however, said the 100 per cent tax valuation of each county must be used in the formula.

With this change, Jacobs said, the economic index figured for the Canyon School District was altered significantly when the 100 per cent tax valuations of Randall County were figured rather than the assessed valuations.

For next year, the school district will have to raise $193,102. This fiscal year the district had to raise $140,450 and last year the district raised $128,297.

Jacobs said he feels the current funding formula used to figure individual school district's shares of funding levels will remain in effect for the coming fiscal year even though Texas legislators are now considering five bills in Austin which would considerably alter the funding formulas.

He said it appears unlikely any new legislation which mandates far-reaching changes in the funding system could be implemented in full by next fall.

Our World

Pornographers Are Wrong

By ANN BROWN

The purveyors of filth, who have filled our theaters, televisions, and textbooks with sordid trash, defend their conduct by claiming they are "presenting life as it is, giving the public what it wants, and it's the only way to make money."

They are wrong on all three counts.

For every lazy thief skulking in the night, there are dozens of hard-working men laboring to support their families, and increase the gross national product.

For every embezzler there are dozens of bankers meticulously guarding their clients' accounts.

For every thug, con man, and chiseler preying on the public, there are dedicated pastors, teachers, doctors, and nurses laboring unceasingly for the consolation, welfare, and comfort of humanity.

For every mother who abuses and neglects her children, there are others who sacrifice their lives for their families.

And for every home that is demolished by weak, selfish, irresponsible mates, two are kept together by people wise enough and strong enough to subject their personal desires to the will of God, and the welfare of their families and society.

As for giving the public what it wants, ask the cable television subscriber why he's willing to pay when free TV is available.

The most common answer is that he wants to avoid the propaganda, homogenizing, crime, violence, and filth pouring from the three free channels.

A little analyzing of the most successful TV shows should convince any open-minded producer that the public wants wholesome entertainment.

The most beloved TV series of all time is I Love Lucy. The reruns are still seen in almost every viewing area in the world.

What makes Lucy so popular? Violence? Crime? Filth?

The fun, friendship, and foolishness of two middle-aged families appealed to Americans from all stratas of society; they hated to miss a single program. One business firm put a sign in his closed door on Thursday night when the shops were open "We Love Lucy, Too."

The sophisticates have tried every scheme imaginable to get Gunsmoke off the air. And even many loyal viewers deplore the violence and "unsatisfactory" endings. The average fans cannot explain why they watch it.

However moth-eaten the story, or corny the characters, the principals on Gunsmoke always stand firm for the old-fashioned virtues of honesty, decency, and kindness.

The Marshall and his deputies cannot be bought. They are always courteous to women, and kind to children, and unfortunates. Americans like that.

The "broadminded" people are loud in their condemnation of the "ignorant red necks" who are protesting the "slice-of-life" textbooks.

What about the critics who tore classics like Little Black Sambo and Huckleberry Finn out of the textbooks? They managed to "burn the books" without raising a ripple of publicity.

The liberal left is like the farmer's bullfrogs. The old man contracted with a local restaurant to supply them with frog legs. When he drained his pond to catch the frogs, he found only two big ones croaking away.

"From the noise they made," said the farmer, "I'd a sworn there was at least a million of 'em."

One loud-mouthed woman on the left got prayer and Bible reading banned from public schools. Yet thousands of parents on the right can't get rid of textbooks so obscene that newspapers don't dare print the objectionable passages.

Shakespeare has been popular with scholars for nearly 500 years. No matter how many Falstaffs, Iago's, and MacBeths he may have created, there has never been any question that Shakespeare was on the side of the angels.

"Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again" (William Cullen Bryant).

A few honest people are trying to offer truth a helping hand by protesting the profane obscenities that pass for entertainment and education.

With all our faults, America under God is still the hope of all humanity.

Routes To Destruction

By CARROLL WILSON

If doomsday is the message coming today from national observors, it is a message at least steeped in more reason than that of the simple gut-reaction-oriented placard bearers.

The message that civilization is in for, if not doom, then the first step this side of that eventuality, is not simply a manifestation of innate pessimism, a kind of emotion which fathers lethargy. It is a call which should be heeded to induce action, or at least thought, a pessimistic call to be sure, but not a call to be rejected outright just because it is pessimistic. A desire to be optimistic, cheerful and unfearful of the future can be more blinding, more inherently dangerous than can pessimism.

That, in a paragraph, is the rationale for these few lines of newspaper space. If these few lines taken as a whole add to the gloom of the times, so be it. The evidence available can lead to no conclusion other than justification of gloom.

America, I would argue, is today jousting with two historical and prevailing social attitudes which will bear the responsibility, if bought wholesale, for the demise of this civilization as we know it. The two social attitudes must be viewed, of course, in the context of their impact on social events, or the impact of social events on the attitudes. These two attitudes are not communism and a kind of neo-fascism, which are largely irrelevant issues when compared to the potential impact of the full American acceptance of the concepts of moral relativism and egalitarianism.

If de Toqueville, that 18th century observer of American ways and mores, was right in his assertion that the greatest wave of his time and into the future would be the inevitable rush by mankind toward democracy, the ways we as Americans handle these two challenges to our future will have infinitely more impact than our problems with an American president.

Because it is in the very way that Americans handle their social and governmental affairs, the concepts upon whichthey base decisions, and the rationale they use to justify those decisions, that the future course of democracy will be gauged.

As de Toqueville and his contemporary John Stuart Mill feared, however, the rush toward democracy in America has been one largely borne of blindness, of ignorance of this business of governing and being governing, this business of decision-making. Mill and de Toqueville warned that the majority in a democratic social system could be wrong in its decisions, but that the prevalent feeling in a democracy that that which is decided to be right by the majority is, because the majority deemed it right, right was something to be feared much more than any dissident minority. What they feared was that the dictum espoused by 18th Century utilitarians such as Jeremy Bentham that the object of government should be to provide the greatest good for the greatest number could lead to disaster if what the greatest number perceived to be of greatest good was in fact a misperception.

The fact is that the pervasive theme in America today is one of equality — not equality of opportunity, but equality in all things. We have, in a phrase, gone overboard on the business of nurturing our democratic roots.

There is an almost unknowing urge among legislators, for example, to equalize salaries and pay, particularly in these times of economic hardship. Labor unions themselves purvey the attitude of equality. The tone of today is not one of equalizing opportunities but of establishing societal regulations, fostering social attitudes which preach a gospel of the desireability for all men to be equal in material wealth, in education and in all aspects of social relationships.

This move toward a dynamic equalization of Americans is manifested in one way, as notes the author of "The Trousered Ape," by those very things which we point to as virtues in our culture.

It is, he notes, a mathematical truth, that an equal relationship is sought by means of the lowest common denominator, not the highest.

American literature, movies, television and the arts in general manifest this search for the lowest common denominator. I think it has been found in sex, violence and hatred.

There was a good deal of truth in the words of Hobbes, who said men are motivated primarily by fear, thus arguing that the lowest common denominator of man is fear.

Coupled with fear, man is motivated by the sexual urge and the urge to outdo his cohorts, the last assumption based solely on the almost religious dogma of Darwin who brought us the message of survival of the fittest.

As America has drawn itself toward the full implementation of a society based on the actual equality of all in the face of almost overpowering evidence that the nature of man is simply not bent to that route, it has also embraced, albeit perhaps unknowingly, the social correlative to Einstein's early-century theory of material relativity.

Moral relativity which has resulted in situation ethics, prevails as man manifests his most common characteristics because the two are entirely compatible. Man stripped to his most common denominator is apparently a man who can not abide standards. Standards, provided in the long course of Western civilization by the church, have fallen into disrepute. Undisciplined modern art, mindless literature, emasculating and condescending television pabulum, appeal to modern man stripped of his ability to embrace the right and wrong, the standards which prevail in all situations, whether established by what political theorists call natural law or what those of religion call the moral laws of God.

Moral relativism is convenient. It allows man, as the center of the universe, to set his own standards in light of a given situation or event. He is responsible (to whom?) for his own code of ethics, his own rules of morality.

It is situation ethics which bred Watergate, which breeds the kind of isolationism which would allow the starving millions of the Third World to die, which breeds within parents the inability to cope with their children, and the inability of their children to cope with decisions once physically matured.

Moral relativism is the epitome of irresponsibility if one believes that man alone is innately or intuitively capable of making the right decision based on an intrinsically held moral code (perhaps emanating from chromosomal material), and if one believes man is not responsible to his fellow man or a higher law or order, or God.

Moral relativism would on the one hand elevate man to the position of God, as the ultimate decision-maker, but would in reality degrade man, a fearful and frail figure, by demanding of him decisions he is incapable of handling.

The denial of definite and explicit standards, a denial implicit both in the move toward egalitarianism and the move toward moral relativism, strips man of his ability to be human, to reach out, to be compassionate, to love and be loved.

It is only in the world of standards, Hobbes said, that man's life becomes more than a "short, nasty and brutish" existence.

We are, in fact, turning to a state of nature, in the Hobbesian sense, even in a society as complex as America.

This move toward a complex state of nature cannot be avoided, I fear.

Americans are in the position, for example, of standing by helplessly while millions starve in Bengladesh and India. We cannot produce enough to help them. Moral relativists take the realistic road and say "let them starve," arguing that we are powerless to stop the starvation and what little we could do would simply prolong the agony of the skeletonized masses.

America, inured to the repulsive by efforts toward a levelling at the least common denominator, will stand by passively, unable to do anything if they wanted to, as great numbers die for lack of food.

Or, conversely, the spaceship Earth will become so crowded that individual efforts at grabbing what one can to satisfy one's wants will become the necessity.

Either way, a state of nature will be the state of affairs.

On the other hand, if this forecast be true, moral relativism, which deludes man into believing his decisions are moral ones if he believes them to be moral based on his private code, would be a salve to Americans who watch the demise of the world from an easy chair.

The real question, then, one of only rhetorical significance against this backdrop: Has civilization outgrown the usefulness of Christianity?

If so, the end will indeed be agonizing.

Draft Sign-ups End For Youth

Canyon men will no longer have to worry about signing up for the draft under an order signed recently by President Ford.

April 1 was the final day 18-year-olds were registered for the selective service system. New procedures for maintaining a pool of young men for military duty will be announced at a later date.

Canyon Hires Dimmitt Coach

A man whose Dimmitt team missed the district championship last fall by just one game has been hired as head football coach and athletic director here.

Deane Wright, 45, who's coached two years at Dimmitt and compiled a 15-5 record during that time, will assume duties in Canyon as soon as he is released at Dimmitt.

Wright was hired Thursday night by Canyon School Board members after a 1½ hour executive session during which they talked with the new coach. His salary will be $15,380 per year.

A West Texas State University graduate in 1951, Wright played college football under the late Frank Kimbrough as center and linebacker.

He has been a head football coach for 13 years, including eight years at Crosbyton, one year at Springlake-Earth, two years at Hamblin and two years at Dimmitt.

His overall won-loss record is 80 wins, 49 losses and two ties.

At Dimmitt, Wright's teams compiled a 6-4 record his first year and 9-1 record his second. The Dimmitt team was beaten in the final game of the season by Olton for the district title.

Wright, who has not been athletic director at Dimmitt, said he has been athletic director nine of the 13 years he's been a head coach.

Canyon's new high school mentor said when he initially learned of the opening here he was not sure he wanted to move from Dimmitt.

"The first time I visited here I didn't know if I was interested because I have a fine job in Dimmitt," he said. "But, the more I looked into it and the more I associated with the people here, I became more interested in it, and in the last week or two I decided I d really like to have the job."

Former Canyon Coach Ron Mills, who resigned in February to take a similar position in Bay City, predicted before he left Canyon that the 1975 version of the Eagles would be strong district contendors.

Wright said he's not had time to make that precise a judgment, but he does plan to make some changes in the high school team.

For one thing, he favors the wishbone offense relying on quick establishment of a consistent running game and the pass to confuse the defense.

"I don't go into a ball game to throw the ball every play," he said. "I'd rather establish the running game and make them play that way. We've been successful throwing the ball because we've established the running game first."

Wright, who said he'd like to report for work Monday, said he's not made any decisions yet on his high school football staff.

Contracts were not extended to those assistant coaches who worked under Mills in anticipation of the hiring of a new coach.

"I'm going to look the situation over first," Wright said. "I'll talk with them before I make a decision."

Wright said in his capacity as athletic director he plans to stress and organize an athletic program from the junior high level into high school which is topnotch in all areas "not just football."

School board members voted unanimously on Wright's appointment to the position.

Another Meeting Set On Interstate

Representatives from cities along the proposed route of Interstate 70 — now U. S. 60 — will meet Tuesday night to lay plans for a campaign to carry to Washington to urge congressmen to fund the redesignation of the highway between Amarillo through Canyon to Alamogordo, N.M., as an interstate route.

Eight persons from Canyon will make the trip to Hereford for the meeting to join with representatives from Amarillo, Hereford, Friona, Roswell and other Texas and New Mexico cities.

The meeting is in response to a federal Department of Transportation report issued earlier this year recommending that the route from Amarillo to Alamogordo not be funded as an interstate highway.

"It looks like our job is to convince Congress that there is a special need for development of this route, that all groups are behind the project, and that we are not willing to accept the DOT report as the final word," Barney Wiegand of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce wrote interested citizens last week. "The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss how best we can go about doing that job."

The current route of U. S. 60 was recommended to the federal transportation department to become part of the federal interstate highway system by the highway departments of both Texas and New Mexico last year. The route is one of 10 which Congress asked the DOT to study as possible additions to the interstate system.

New Mexico representatives recently held a similar meeting in Alamogordo and will be present with their suggestions at the Tuesday night meeting in Hereford.

Representatives from the Texas Highway Department are also expected to attend the session.

Randall County commissioners went on record two weeks ago calling for Congress to to reconsider the department of transportation's negative report and urging funding of the interstate.

Canyon city commissioners will consider passage of a similar resolution at their Monday night meeting here.

Canyon officials have been working on the project along with other cities' representatives for about two years.

Texas Highway Department officials recommended last year that the highway become a part of the interstate system and that the route follow the current route of U. S. 60 through Canyon.

Gene Howe PTA Gives Aid To School Over 10 Years

The Gene Howe Parent Teacher Association will be celebrating the school's tenth anniversary at 7:30 Monday at the school.

Mrs. Ernestine Harp, president of the PTA outlined some of the goals and accomplishments of the PTA.

The group was organized Dec. 9, 1965 as a local unit of the Texas branch of the National Congress of PTA. According to Mrs. Harp, the goals of the PTA are to promote the welfare of children in home, school, church and community; to raise the standards of home life; to secure adaquate laws for the care and protection of children and youth; to bring into closer relation the home and school and that parents and teachers may cooperate intelligently in the training of the child; and to develop between the educators and general public such united efforts as will secure for every child the highest advantages in physical mental, social and spiritual education.

Starting with a membership of 105, ten years later that number has increased to 575.

"We strive to involve and develop a warm relationship between the school perssonel and parents. It is our dream to involve people of the community who are not parents of our students but are interested in the welfare of children and youth," Mrs. Harp said. "With this purpose in mind, we have organized a Falcon Fan Club to actively involve mothers in the classroom in assisting with individualization in specific areas," she added.

The money raised by the PTA through various projects, goes back into the school.

The results of the PTA's efforts can be seen in the visual aid equipment the school uses. Along with Canyon Independent School District funds and those raised by the PTA, the school has tape recorders and tapes, head sets, film strips and transparencies for use in science, math, reading and spelling.

Other things the PTA has helped in supplying to the students include maps, books, records, trampoline pads, duplicators, cameras and diagnostic kits.

According to Mrs. Harp, the Gene Howe PTA presents donations to the students in the form of ribbons and trophies for track, music, spelling, attendance, science, art fair, and also gives a banana split party for winners of membership and chili supper contests.

"Part of our yearly budget goes for training of officers in PTA work. This involves many hours of the person's time but is climaxed in service to our school and children.

This year's executive committee along with Mrs. Harp include Karolyn Farmer, I vice president; Sandra Wait, II vice president; Sarah Edwards, III vice president, Bettye Stokes, recording secretary; Gwyn Sellers, corresponding secretary; Janette Hale, treasurer; Jackie Mayfield, reporter-historian; Troyce Mulherin, parliamentarian; Raydell Palmer, hospitality chairman; Glenna Schmidt, room representative chairman; Gaylia Cochran, faculty representative; and Luther Lawless, principle.

Lions Are Selling Brooms-Mops, Etc.

Brooms, mops and other miscellaneous household cleaning aids and supplies are being sold in a citywide canvas by the Canyon Evening Lions Club.

The annual sale will extend for three weeks during April with proceeds used by the club for support of a crippled children's camp and other service projects including the purchase of eyewear for needy children. The mops and brooms are made by the Lighthouse for the Blind.

Band To Sell Subscriptions

Canyon High School Band members will be calling on Canyon and area residents during the week of April 7 for subscriptions and renewals of The Canyon News.

Part of the money earned by the students will go to the Canyon Band Parents. The organization will use the funds to help finance next year's band trip.

Chamber Meets Mon.

Directors of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the community center to begin planning for the annual Canyon Days Celebration which is scheduled around July 4.

Plans will also be laid for the Thursday morning membership breakfast.

Chamber Manager Roland Black said initial planning is also slated on the commemorative medalion which will be produced this year by the chamber for issuance. Last year the chamber issued and sold bronze, silver and gold-plated coins commemorating Texas cattle country.

Mrs. Troyce Mulherin, left, and Mrs. Ernestine Harp, PTA officials, scan a photo album spanning the 10-year history of Gene Howe School. Mrs. Harp and Mrs. Mulherin were leaders in the planning for the 10th anniversary celebration scheduled for Monday night at the school.

Occult Topic For Speaker

Demons, exorcism, the occult — horrible yet fascinating topics — will be the focus of Dr. John Newport, guest lecturer at the West Texas State University Willson Lecture Series Monday-Wednesday.

Presently professor of philosophy of religion at the Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Dr. Newport has spent many years gathering information on the occult in such places as South America.

His 11 a.m. lecture Monday will be on "The Heart of the Occult World," followed by a 9:30 a.m. lecture Tuesday on "Exorcism of Demons: Christian of Occult" and a 10 a.m. talk Wednesday on "The Appeal of the Occult World: Disclosure of the Future and Spiritual Worlds." The public is invited to attend.

Part of this knowledge has been featured in his book "Demons, Demons, Demons," published in 1972. Newport has also authored two other books, "Theology and Contemporary Art Forms" and "Why Christians Fight Over the Bible," as well numerous other scholarly and popular articles which have appeared in journals, encyclopedias and books.

He holds six degrees in philosophy and theology, including an honorary Doctor of Letters from William Jewell College in Missouri. In addition, he has studied at the universities of Basel and Zurich in Switzerland, and has been a post-doctoral visiting scholar at Harvard University and visiting scholar at Union Seminary, New York City.

Dr. Newport has been interim pastor of more than 25 churches, including the First Baptist Church in Amarillo, and has guest lectured at more than 12 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

He has spoken to youth, college and international student groups in most of the Southern and Southwestern states, Hawaii and Mexico. In 1965-66 he visited the Far East presenting lecture series in universities and seminaries in Korea, Japan and Hong Kong. In 1974 he visited South America presenting lectures and leading conferences in Columbia, Chili, Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela.

Midwestern University board; J.C. Martin, chairman of the Texas A&I System board; A.G. Farfel, chairman of the University of Houston board; and Bernard G. Johnson, chairman of the board of the State Senior Colleges, which oversees Southwest Texas State, Sam Houston State, Angelo State and Sul Ross.

"These are the only ones we've contacted at this point," Box and Formby said, "But we feel sure when the other universities and colleges realize the danger they will join in."

Box and Formby said the language used in the controversial section "clearly states the legislature shall have the authority to approve issuance of bonds.

"This differs from the current Constitution which vests that power with the local governing boards," they said.

The Texas House of Representatives is to consider the same proposal for a new Constitution this week.

"We feel sure the House members will not want to take away the authority of local boards," Box and Formby said. "After all, traditionally the state of Texas has shown its belief in control at the local level where problems are better known."

Box and Formby clarified that they are not necessarily against a new Constitution for Texas.

"We, and others in higher education, feel strongly this particular language must be changed," they said. "This can be done without damaging the proposed document. It will make it more acceptable to the voters and will leave the authority at the local level where it belongs."

If House and Senate approve the proposed new version of the Constitution, It must go to the voters for concurrenteon the ballot next November.

TSTA Endorses Amendments

The Randall County Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) has endorsed the two constitutional amendments which will be on the April 22 special election ballot. The changes affect retired teachers and legislators.

Amendment 1 would allow the state to continue paying increased benefits which began February 1 for teachers already retired.

Amendment 2 would increase the rate of pay and allowances which members of the Texas Legislature have drawn since 1960.

Dave Corley, president, Randall County of TSTA, said that unless voters approve Amendment 1 the retired teachers will immediately lose the higher benefits enacted by the Legislature this year at the urging of Governor Dolph Briscoe and the Texas State Teachers Association.

"Many of these people, who have given their lives to public education at low salaries, just cannot live on their regular benefits in today's inflation," Mr. Corley declared. "It would be tragic for them to lose some benefits after receiving them for a while."

Legislators are much in the same boat, Mr. Corley said. Their present pay and allowances have been in effect since 1960 and have no relation to present conditions.

Amendment 2 would raise lawmakers' salaries from $4,800 to $7,200, per diem expenses while in session from $12 to $30, and mileage to and from Austin from 10 to 16 cents per mile, the amount now allowed state employes.

WTSU Professors Seek Answers To World Food Problems

Perhaps one-fourth or even one-half of the world's population, that is, two billion people, are on the verge of starvation today.

While the residents of such profilic food-producing regions as the Panhandle may not realize this fact, their attitudes, ever-improving agricultural methods and economics could play a major role in solving the food crisis in the future.

But for two West Texas State University professors, all that can be done in the immediate future is to continue the development of hybrids seeds and the advancement of agricultural technology in hopes that the existing political and economic roadblocks will end.

"Presently what we have in the world today is that the population is exceeding in most parts of the world the available supply of food," says Dr. Robert Sawvell, WTSU associate professor and acting head of geography. "This is particularly true in Latin America, Africa and South Asia. Whether or not we can sustain this growing population is closely related to increasing food production in those areas."

That technology is found in North America, "where we're making great strides in increasing production through the development of hybrids and increasing nitrogen production," notes Dr. Ron Thomason, WTSU associate professor of plant science.

But the transferral of such vital knowledge to the starving countries must first surmount the complex tangles of politics and economics. Divergent views exist on the nature of the problem, whether there is one and whatshould be done about it.

"There are three views of world hunger," Sawvell says. "The first is one held by a number of people in this country who question whether there really is a problem. The second school argues that population control is unnecessary — this is a view held by the Vatican, the Soviets and the Chinese, and that it is not population control that is needed but the reform of social conditions not only in the countries who face hunger but in the producing countries. Lastly, the view of the school principally made up of demographers is that this is the 'survival of the fittest struggle.'"

Under-developed and developing countries also claim that the countries with surplus foodstuffs refuse to share their wealth, according to Sawvell.

"Distribution is so tied up in politics it is sometimes impossible to move surplus grain to deficit countries," he continues.

But this is not seen as an answer.

"At an American Society of Agronomers meetings in Chicago, it was stated that we should no longer try to solve the food problem by shipping grain because it destroys incentives in the people. We should move into training these people in production of food," Thomason says.

"By shipping supplies of grain, the countries can become dependent upon us and we will have destroyed their local agriculture," Sawvell notes.

"The question is where do we find the compromise position between what the developed world sees as a population problem and the developing worlds sees as a shortage of food problem," Sawvell continues.

"But there is no question we are going to have to in some way limit population growth."

The solutions seem to rest in ideas and in people, but not in the actual transferral of food or equipment.

"I think it would be unwise of us to export our high-energy, mechanized type of agriculture to everyone in the world," Sawvell says. "If everyone country utilized as much energy in agriculture as we did, there would be little doubt that the available supply of oil would be used up in 20 years."

What we should do is teach them how to achieve maximum production on minimum acreage, he observes.

Sawvell predicts that while the situation won't change appreciably for North Americans in the future, "The real crisis is going to come in those areas where population is increasing over production. We have to face realities. We have fought over something more superfluous than food. Any country worth its salt, if its people are starving and there is food across the border, is going to go get it. What we are looking at is a potential powderkeg. As far as peace in the world is concerned, we know we can help, we know we have the technology, the question is do we have the time to do it?"

The time or situation has not yet come to thrust the crisis foremost into the American people's minds, who are involved in their own faltering economy.

"Let me speak from the viewpoint of the farmer and rancher," Thomason says. "I think he is concerned, but the overriding thing is the economics of it. I think he is more concerned with right here at home than he is with developing or underdeveloped countries. To be able to help them is going to take some type of incentive for the American farmer and rancher.

A Food and Population Seminar will be held on the West Texas State University campus April 19. Dr. Sawvell will be in charge.

Tennis Camp Spaces Available

Registration for the sixth annual West Texas Tennis Camp continues at a brisk pace, according to camp director David Kent, but plenty of spaces remain open for two of the three summer sessions.

The camp, on the campus of West Texas State University, is scheduled for three sessions, June 1-7, June 22-28, and July 27-August 2.

"The first session is already filled, but we still have plenty of openings in the second and third," said Kent, who also is head tennis coach at WTSU.

Over 1,200 young tennis players have improved their games since the camp was started five years ago. Campers enjoy excellent tennis facilities, a modern dormitory, and balanced meals.

Cost for each weeklong session is $150. Application forms are available by writing David Kent at West Texas State, PO Box 413, Canyon, Texas 79016. A $50 deposit is required with all applications. The camp cost includes room, board, instruction and all activities.

Campers receive an extra bonus during their off hours. The $4-million WTSU Activities Center is open to them. Inside the AC, campers will find swimming, bowling, paddleball and handball courts, and many other varied activities.

The second and third sessions of the camp will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

"Man Of Mancha" Opens At BIT Here Friday Night

"Man of La Mancha" has been cast as the spring musical production for the opera workshop of West Texas State University with the opening performance set for Friday evening, April 11, at 8 p.m. in the Branding Iron Theatre at West Texas State University.

Based on the life and works of Miguel de Cervantes of Saavedra, the "Man of La Mancha" will feature Royal Brantley in the title role. Brantley is also the director of the musical to be presented April 11-12 at 8 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. April 17-18 with 2 o'clock matinee performances slated on Sundays, April 13 and April 20.

Ticket box office for the musical will open Monday, April 7, and ticket prices will be $3 for adults or $2 for students with all seats reserved. University students bearing ID cards can make their reservations with the box office also. For further information on reservations contact the box office at 656-3248.

The cast will also include Joe Anderson as the padre, Cecil Fulfer as Anselmo, Julie Gregg as Antonia, Judy Willis as the housekeeper, Billy Talley as the barber, Scott Herrington as captain of the inquisition and Kathy Schmidt as Maria.

Bob Seeds, Frank Davis, Leonard Herndon, Kip Watkins, J. D. Bayless and Bruce Ford portray the muleteers; Joe Ship is guitarist, Sally Anderson is Fermina; David Pruitt, Fred May, Daryl Goodall and M. McGill are guards of the inquisition; Valerie McCarthey, Carl Evans, David Brownlee, Cecil Fulfer and Frank Davis are Moorish dancers; and the horse and the mule are played by Carla Swatzell and Susan Jordy.

The formalistic set designed by James Kemmerling employs an enlarged stage with a cantilever extension and a raked effect at the back. A series of platforms and step units further add to the illusion of a castle dungeon setting.

"However, we rely primarily on lighting to create the illusions and moods that make the show technically feasible," Kemmerling stated.

Lighting is by Pat Garrett. Cheryl Tatham is in charge of costumes, Kathleen Jackson is in charge of props, and Rich Dersheimer is stage manager.

Stage director of "Man of La Mancha" is William A. Moore. Margaret Echols Moore is acting coach, Jerry Doan is musical director and Neil Hess is choreographer.

Clubwomen's Nominee Gets District Honor

The "outstanding junior clubwoman" for the Top of Texas District of the Texas Federation of Women's Club was selected from among nominees including clubs throughout the Panhandle of Texas with Mrs. Ronnie (Johnnie) Gordon of Canyon receiving the top honor.

Mrs. Gordon, who was nominated for the district's selection by the Heritage Woman's Club of Canyon, was recognized and presented with the honor at the Top of Texas District Convention held this week end at the Hilton Inn in Amarillo.

With backing provided by the Heritage Woman's Club and the nomination from the Top of Texas District, Mrs. Gordon's portfolio of qualifications will now be considered in the statewide competition seeking the state's selection as the "outstanding junior clubwoman of Texas." The state title will be presented during the upcoming Texas Federation of Women's Clubs convention to be held in Houston April 20-23.

Nominees for the outstanding junior clubwoman competition must have been a member of a state affiliated federated club for a minimum of three years and the club itself must be affiliated with TFWC for four years before presenting a candidate for the competition.

The honor is a recognition of service beyond the call of duty and is a recognition of leadership ability, personal commitments to furtherance of clubwork, and a result of exceptional service given at the local level.

Mrs. Ronnie (Johnnie) Gordon
Receives District Endorsement As
"Outstanding Junior Clubwoman"

Mrs. Gordon was a charter member of the Heritage Woman's Club in Canyon which chartered in 1969 and has held the club offices including president for the 1971-72 clubyear. She has also served as treasurer, parliamentarian and federation council representative from her club and held a number of chairmanships in her own club.

As a member of the Canyon Federated Club Council, Mrs. Gordon has served as a delegate from her Heritage Woman's Club and served as the council's president during 1971-72 and this past year was the council's chairman for the game night which benefitted the Canyon Division of the Opportunity Plan at West Texas State.

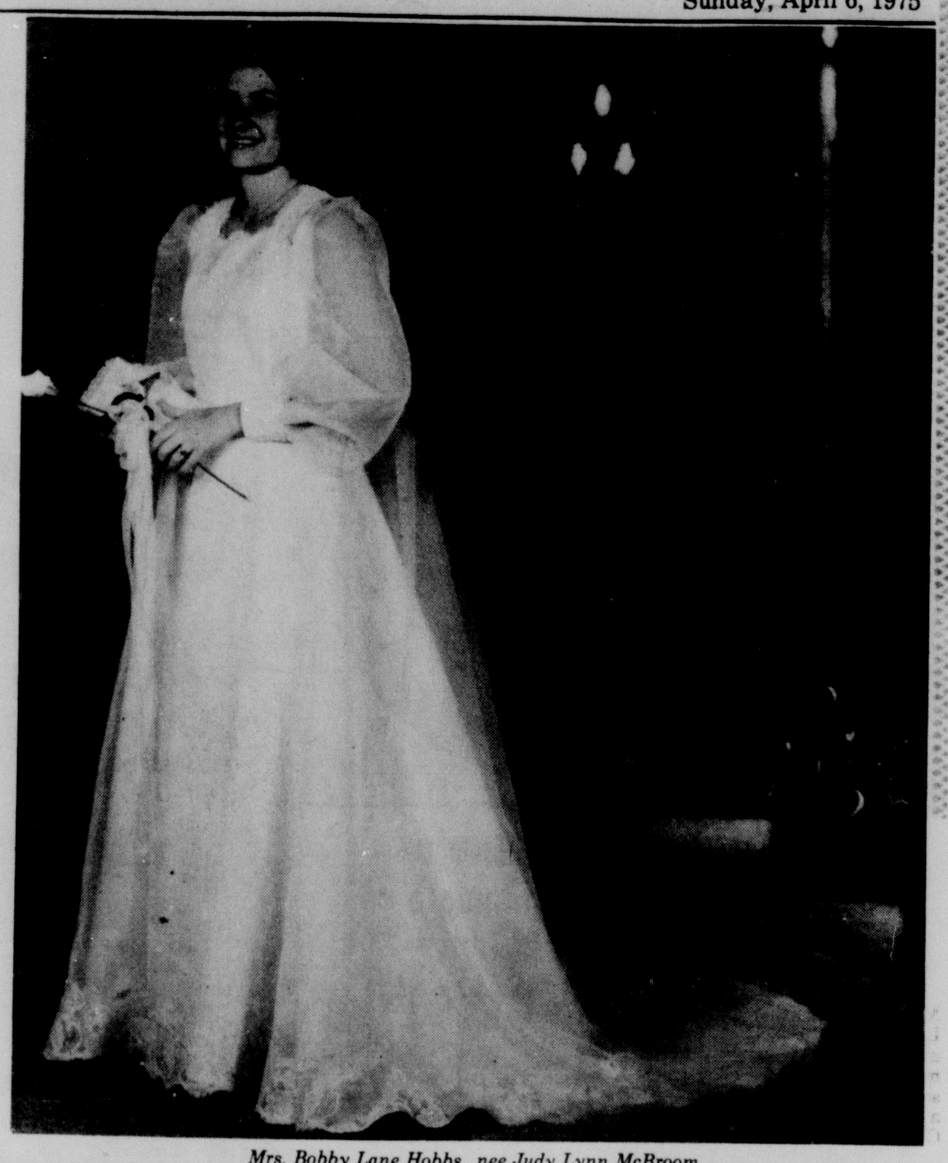
She is currently serving the junior federated clubs of the Top of Texas District as the membership and yearbook chairman for district and during 1972-74 served as the district junior department's public affairs chairman and won first and third place state awards on her annual reports.

At the state level, Mrs. Gordon is presently serving as the TFWC junior conservation chairman. On the district slate she serves as junior membership chairman and junior yearbook chairman.

Aside from her clubwork involvement in the community, Mrs. Gordon was the city's co-chairman for the March of Dimes collection campaign in 1973-74 with a record $1,121.73 collected.

She and her husband, Ronnie, who is an elementary math teacher at Rex Reeves Elementary School, have three children, Kellie, 12; Leslie, 10; and Scottie, 6. The Gordons are members of the First Baptist Church of Canyon where she is the director for the third and fourth grade Sunday School department. In church activities, Mrs. Gordon was involved during last summer as an instructor for a regional Bible School workshop involving grades 4-6.

Mrs. Gordon received the B. S. degree from West Texas State University in 1967 and has served both as a homebound teacher and as a physical education aide for the Canyon Independent Schools.



Mrs. Bobby Lane Hobbs nee Judy Lynn McBroom

Judy McBroom Marries Bobby Hobbs In Ceremonies Saturday Afternoon

Miss Judy Lynn McBroom and Bobby Lane Hobbs pledged double ring marriage vows Saturday afternoon, April 5, at 3 o'clock at the First United Methodist Church of Canyon with Rev. Roger Woodson, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hammon, Okla. presiding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie H. McBroom of 903 7th Avenue Canyon. She graduated in May 1974 from Canyon High School and is presently a freshman student at West Texas State University, where she will be continuing her studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Hobbs of Oklahoma City, Okla. are parents of the bridegroom who graduated from Elk City, Oklahoma High School and is a May degree candidate for a degree in biology at West Texas State University. He is a former football player for the Buffaloes at the university.

Traditional processional and recessional selections from Mendelsson and Lohengrin were presented by the organist, Mrs. Glenn Dowlen and vocal arrangements of The Wedding Song and Follow Me were presented by Debby Hobbs, sister of the bridegroom, with piano accompaniment by Miss Carla Swatzell. Wedding guests were registered by Miss Susan Cox of Canyon.

Altar decorations featured an arch candelabra and a pair of pyramid candelabrum garlanded with greenery. Highlighting the arrangement were two urns filled with peach tinged gladioli and white mums. The altar was draped with white satin and a kneeling bench was used in the rites.

Robin DeWitt of Fort Worth, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl in a formal length gown matching the bridesmaids as she carried a basket filled with white rose petals. The ringbearer was Michael McBroom II, Dallas, a nephew of the bride, who wore a candlelight colored suit with a peach colored ruffled shirt as he carried a heart-shaped candlelight satin ring pillow.

Identical dresses of peach colored crepe with draped necklines and long fitted sleeves were worn by the bridal attendants including the maid of honor, Miss Cindy Cawthon, and bridesmatrons, Mrs. Dewayne Sexton of Canyon and Mrs. Michael McBroom of Dallas, a sister-in-law of the bride. Miss Kathy Platt of Canyon was the bridesmaid. Peach tinted mums and white roses in nosegay arrangements were carried by the bridal attendants for the formal setting.

Carlton Buchanan of Elk City, Oklahoma served as best man and groomsmen were Dewayne Sexton of Canyon, Cole Fraley of Borger and Donny Dirickson of Elk City, Okla. The groom's attendants wore black tuxedos with peach ruffled shirts as did the ushers, Kyle Davis of Norman, Okla. and Mark Elms of Amarillo, the bridegroom's cousins, and Jim McBroom of Canyon, a brother of the bride. The bridegroom's attire included a formal candlelight jacket with a boutonniere of stephanotis worn over a matching ruffled shirt above black trousers.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of candlelight silk organza over peau de soie. The wedding gown featured a square neckline trimmed with appliqués of peau d'ange lace and seed pearls with a button-loop closing in the back. The high fitted bodice featured front and back pin tucks with a half belt in back. Long full sheer organza sleeves featured the pin tucking for cuffs with a button-loop closing.

The lined flared skirt cascaded into a chapel length wedding train with a hemline border of re-embroidered peau d'ange lace. Lace flowers and seed pearls were appliqued to the lower front of the wedding skirt.

A chapel length wedding veil of imported illusion worn by the bride was attached to a satin covered angel wing band trimmed with peau d'ange lace and seed pearls. The bride carried a white satin covered Bible, which was her birth gift, with a cascade arrangement of white gardenias and stephanotis. She wore the traditional blue garter, carried a lucky sixpence in her shoe and wore a brooch borrowed from the bridegroom's mother.

Mothers of the couple wore formal gowns for the occasion as the bride's mother selected pale yellow chiffon and the bridegroom's mother had pastel green. The bride's grandmother had a jacketed dress of blue jersey complemented with a white rose corsage.

Friends and wedding guests honored the couple at a reception in Fellowship Hall immediately following the wedding ceremony. The bride's table was laid with a cream colored hand drawn Mexican Lace cloth over peach satin with a draped skirt as the three tiered wedding cake topped with wedding bells was served by Mrs. Raby Ratliff and Mrs. Danny Miller, both of Canyon.

Cream colored linen covered the bridegroom's table where chocolate cake and coffee were served by Miss Susan Hull of Canyon and Mrs. Lindell Norman II of Amarillo.

Reception hostesses were Mrs. John Hardaway, Mrs. C. A. McBroom, Mrs. Jesse Bewley, Mrs. Henry Wiggins, Mrs. C. W. Parker, Jr., Mrs. T. G. Hull, Mrs. Roscoe Richardson, Mrs. J. A. Hoover, Mrs. B. R. Clark, Mrs. Arnold Prichard and Mrs. Archie Dean Davis, all of Canyon.

The newlyweds departed the reception for a wedding trip to an undisclosed destination with the bride attired in a peach colored jersey dress featuring gathered softness, a hooded cream colored cape and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of gardenias and white roses for the trip.

The bridegroom's parents were hosts for a rehearsal dinner served at Merritt's Family Steak House in Canyon for the wedding party earlier. The wedding party was also honored with a luncheon earlier in the wedding day at the home of Mrs. Wesley Cox with Mrs. Phil Swatzell, Mrs. Douglas Jones and Mrs. Jack Swatzell serving as co-hostesses.

A breakfast honoring Miss McBroom and her bridal attendants and their mothers was held by Mrs. John Hardaway with Mrs. Jesse Bewley and Mrs. Danny Miller assisting. Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white polyester crepe wedding gown featuring an empire styling with a square neckline trimmed in lace with miniature blue flowers. The floorlength A-line skirt was bordered at the hemline with matching blue flowered lace. The bride designed and made her own wedding gown for the double ring rites and wore a pearl drop necklace with a pearl accented headdress. She carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations with accenting ribbon streamers.
